

CONTRIBUTORS

Andrew S. Gross is Assistant Professor in American Literature at the John F. Kennedy Institute for American Studies at the Free University, Berlin. He is a member of the International Committee of the American Studies Association. In 2001 he received a Ph.D. in English from the University of California at Davis, where he then taught as a faculty fellow. His book, written in collaboration with Susanne Rohr, on scandalous representations of the Holocaust in contemporary American art, film, and fiction has just come out from Winter Verlag. His most recent articles have appeared in the Arizona Quarterly, Journeys: The International Journal of Travel and Travel Writing, and Journal of Transnational American Studies.

Michael J. Hoffman is Professor Emeritus of English at the University of California at Davis. Aside from a number of essays and book reviews on the Holocaust, his publications include three books on Gertrude Stein, volumes on nineteenth- and twentieth-century American literature, as well as on the theory of fiction. He also wrote a novel titled The Buddy System.

Janusz Kaźmierczak is Assistant Professor at the School of English, Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań, Poland. Among his research interests are the literary image of America in Poland, communist anti-Western propaganda in Poland, and cultural theory. His articles have appeared in American, German, Polish and Portuguese journals and edited collections. His recent publications can be found in the volume IFAtuation: A Life in IFA. A Festschrift for Professor Jacek Fisiak on the Occasion of His 70th Birthday (2006), and the journals Polish-AngloSaxon Studies and Journal of Cold War Studies.

Jarosław Kuczyński is a doctoral student in the Institute of English Studies, University of Warsaw. In 2009, he won the PAAS Award for the Best M.A. Thesis. His article is based on the dissertation which brought him the award.

Marit J. MacArthur received her Ph.D. in English from the University of California, Davis. She is Assistant Professor of English at California State University, Bakersfield. She taught American literature in the Department of American Literature and Culture at the University of Łódź in 2005, and was also a Fulbright research fellow in the Department of English Literature and Culture at the University of Łódź in 2008.

Alicja Piechucka holds her Ph.D. from the University of Łódź, where she is Assistant Professor of American Literature. Her academic interests include modernist poetry, French literature and visual arts. Her research focuses on interdisciplinary studies, in particular comparative literature. She teaches courses on American literature as well as painting.

Tadeusz Pióro is Adjunct Professor at the Institute of English Studies, University of Warsaw, as well as a translator and poet. He has published articles about Frank O'Hara, Ezra Pound, and Ralph Ellison, among others. He is writing a book called Frank O'Hara and the Ends of Modernism.

Agata Preis-Smith has been teaching American literature at the Institute of English Studies, University of Warsaw, since 1983. She specializes in the literature of modernism, poetry, literary theory, and the interrelations of ideology and aesthetics.

Justyna Rusak is a Ph.D. candidate in the Institute of British and American Culture and Literature, University of Silesia, Sosnowiec. Her academic interests include nineteenth- and twentieth-century American literature, existential philosophy, psychoanalysis and modern painting.

Malgorzata Rutkowska is Assistant Professor of American Literature in the Institute of English, Maria Curie Skłodowska University, Lublin. Her research focuses on American and British travel writing in the nineteenth and twentieth century. She is the author of In Search of America. The Image of the United States in Travel Writing of the 1980s and 1990s (2006).

Pawel Stachura is Assistant Lecturer at the School of English, Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań, where he earned Ph.D. in American Literature. His research interests include American social utopias, history of science-fiction, and relations between image and text in pop culture.

Sostene Massimo Zangari holds a Ph.D. in English from the University of Milan, Italy. He has worked extensively on Herman Melville and ethnic American literature. He has recently published articles on Richard Wright's Black Power and Lawd Today!. He works as Teaching Assistant at the Department of English, University of Milan, Italy.

Joanna Ziarkowska is Assistant Professor of American Literature in the Institute of English Studies, University of Warsaw. In her research, she concentrates on ethnic literatures of the United States, in particular Asian and Native.